MUSEUM OF GENERAL AND LOCAL ARCHAEOLOGY.

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

ANTIQUARIAN COMMITTEE

TO THE

SENATE,

December 3, 1888.

[From the Cambridge University Reporter, 1888-89.]

Fourth Annual Report of the Antiquarian Committee

Museum of General and Local Archaeology,

December 3, 1888.

THE ANTIQUARIAN COMMITTEE beg leave to present their Fourth Annual Report to the SENATE.

Staff. Since the last Report of the Committee the post of Attendant has been filled by Mr Edward Coulson, as it was felt that the collections, considering their steady increase during the past five years, could not with propriety be any longer entrusted to the sole care of a boy during the Long Vacation, and at other times when the Curator is absent.

Antiquarian Gallery. A portion of the stand which supports the central table-cases has been filled in, on the one side with eighteen glazed oak drawers, on the other with a glazed case with double doors. The cost of this piece of furniture has been generously defrayed by the Antiquarian Society. The additions to the series of Saxon ornaments and of stone implements have, however, been so numerous during the year that fresh accommodation in the shape of drawers is already urgently needed.

Arrangements are being made by the Curator for the systematic mending, under his own supervision, of the large mass of Roman and Saxon pottery, part of which came into the Museum with the Antiquarian Society's collections in 1883, while part has been acquired subsequently. It is believed that by this means it will be possible to restore several hundred vessels. For their proper exhibition a considerable addition to the existing wall-cases in gallery E will be needed.

A discovery of unusual interest was made in Cambridge at the commencement of the year. A field was being levelled at the back of St John's College, when the workmen cut into a Saxon burying ground. For several days no notice was taken of it; and during that time a number of skeletons and urns (the workmen said several hundreds) had been found and destroyed. As soon, however, as the discovery was made known, steps were taken, with the kind cooperation of the authorities of St John's College and Christ's College, the owners and lessees of the land, to have the ground thoroughly examined, under proper supervision, in the interest of the Museum. The excavations occupied more than six weeks, during which time they were never left unwatched. Either the Curator, or Mr Walter Foster, to whom the best thanks of the University are due for his self-imposed task, were constantly on the spot. These gentlemen were often assisted by Mr Jenkinson, Professor Hughes, Professor Macalister, and others. The objects found were so numerous that it has been impossible, up to the present time, to examine them all in detail, and to draw up an exhaustive catalogue of them. It will therefore be sufficient to mention in this place that at least thirty skeletons, one hundred urns, and a large quantity of ornaments were discovered. The entire 'find' has been placed in the Museum, and forms a most valuable addition to the local Saxon collections. The best thanks of the Museum are due to the Cambridge Antiquarian Society; the entire cost of the excavations, a sum of thirty-six pounds, was defrayed by a grant from its funds, supplemented by private contributions from nine of its members. Had it not been for their liberality this Saxon cemetery could never have been efficiently explored, and the Museum would have suffered a severe loss, as it could not possibly have provided so large a sum out of the very slender grant which is yearly placed at its disposal.

A fine example of fourteenth century carving, in the shape of three misericord stalls, from Brampton Church, Huntingdon, has been placed on deposit in the Museum by the Curator.

Library. An addition to the book-cases, to contain folios, will shortly be completed, the expense being borne by the Antiquarian Society.

A slip-catalogue of the books has been prepared.

The pamphlets have been sorted, and arranged in book-boxes; and the unbound numbers of the serial publications (arranged alphabetically like the bound volumes) have been placed in the cupboard upon sliding shelves.

Ethnological Galleries. Three wall-cases have been entirely rearranged, so as to exhibit in a continuous series as much of the collection from Fiji as could be accommodated in them. The rest of the Fijian collection, as well as numerous objects from other localities, cannot be exhibited for the present, owing to want of room.

The over-crowded condition of all the wall-cases, to which attention was drawn last year, has increased, and it has most seriously impeded the progress of the catalogue, as it is sometimes necessary to empty a whole case in order to examine a single specimen.

The permanent numbering of the specimens has been completed, and labels have been written for all the cases and drawers.

The Curator has presented five glazed cases for the exhibition of the large series of necklaces and smaller personal ornaments, which have remained hitherto packed away out of sight. He has also lent an oak glazed case, in which all the hafted stone implements and some of the weapons have been arranged. This case has been placed over the chest of drawers that contain the unmounted exotic celts.

The Museum has received on loan from S. J. Hickson, Esq., M.A., Downing College, some interesting objects from Celebes and the adjacent islands.

During the current year the Curator has received the following donations towards the 'Museum Accession Fund':

The Curator	5	0	0
W. K. Foster, Esq., 45 Leinster Gardens, W.	20	0	0
Augustus W. Franks, M.A., F.R.S., British Museum	5	0	0

III. Saxon.

30. Over a hundred cinerary urns and food vessels, and a large series of personal ornaments, consisting of forty-four bronze brooches, two silver finger-rings, several hundred amber, glass, clay, and composite beads; six iron shield bosses, eleven iron spear-heads, and a number of iron knives, &c. From a Saxon burial-ground found in a field at the back of St John's College, and explored Feb.—April, 1888. The Cambridge Antiquarian Society and the Subscribers to the 'Digging Fund.'

As it is hoped that a detailed account of this burial place will soon be published by the Antiquarian Society, only the following rough inventory of the most remarkable 'finds' is here added. In it the objects found in situ on the skeletons are alone enumerated. The numbers represent distinct skeletons, nos. I—XII being women.

I. A pair of thin silver-gilt plates (portions of two brooches) divided into concentric rings by the stamped pattern with which they are covered. On the outer and widest of these rings a number of wolf-like animals are represented. A bronze buckle damascened with silver; a great number of amber beads some very large, and a few glass beads (blue and green).

II. A pair of annular brooches, open on one side; beads, &c.

III. A pair of annular brooches; two thin clasps; a silver finger-ring; beads.

IV. A small beautifully finished harp-shaped brooch; fragments of a pair of flat annular brooches; a small leaflike charm, and another shaped like a carpenter's plane; beads.

V. A large cross-shaped brooch, a pair of annular (flat band) brooches; a diminutive silver disc; a crystal bead, a number of large and small amber, and two long blue glass beads.

VI. A cross-shaped brooch, a pair of circular brooches with solid plated discs; a silver coin of Julian, drilled; &c.

VII. A finely worked broad cross-shaped brooch, gilt; two large discs, with traces of thin gold plates; two pairs of gilt clasps, and a number of large amber beads.

VIII. A large cross-shaped brooch, and a pair of small brooches of similar type; two diminutive pendants, their bronze discs stamped with concentric rings of spots; a small oblong plate, stamped on one side with a pair of quatrefoils; beads.

IX. A cross-shaped brooch, a pair of small brooches with square tops; five oblong gilt plates of beautiful design (having formed part of a belt); a buckle; a pair of clasps, and a number of beads of various design and material.

X. A plain brooch with a square top; a pair of well finished cross-shaped brooches; a large flat bead of blue glass and light enamel, some small blue glass beads, &c.

XI. A pair of short cross-shaped brooches; a large flat clay ring, ?armlet; a crystal bead, &c.

XII. A pair of long plain brooches with square tops; a pair of tweezers on a wire ring; a large faceted bead of opaque black glass, beads, &c.

XIII. (A child's skeleton.) A silver finger-ring, and a large oblong blue-black glass bead with raised rings of yellow enamel.

XIV. (A child's skeleton.) A bangle of thin silver wire; a massive ring of bronze, diameter about 1½", and a few beads.

XV. (A child's skeleton.) The shell of a spotted cowry (Cypraea) drilled for suspension; fragments of a pair of annular brooches; a few beads, &c.

XVI—XX. With each of five adult male skeletons a spear-head, the boss of a shield (in one instance with plated studs), and—as was the case with most of the female skeletons—a knife. All these objects are of iron. With some of the skeletons a small "food vessel" was found; but with a number of the bodies no ornaments or any other objects appear to have been buried.

31. A bronze-gilt brooch, length 3*05", with a single cross-bar (2-05" in length) either end of which, as also the top of the brooch itself, is finished off with a hollow ball. Bought in Cambridge. *W. K. Foster, Esq.

32. A pair of iron shears, length 8*05". Thetford,

Norfolk. The Rev. S. S. Lewis, M.A., Corpus Christi College.

32 A. Four iron nails out of a large number found with a skeleton. The nails, 4" in length, are held together, in double rows, by an iron plate through which they have been driven. Hauxton. W. K. Wyley, Esq., Trinity College.

IV. Christian Antiquities.

33. A fragment of an old reredos, white marble relief. Hockington Church. The Rev. W. G. Searle, M.A., Hockington Vicarage.

34. Two bronze crucifix figures. One, length 6*04", which dates from the 11th century, shows traces of enamel, and has blue glass eyes. The other, length 6-05", is of the 13th century. Abbeville, France. The Curator.

35. A Roman sepulchral tablet in white marble (size 22'05" x 18"). It is dedicated to a priest, Britto by name, who died 546 A.D. The inscription is surmounted by a cross. Mertola, S. Portugal. James Warden Esq., Minas do S. Domingos, Portugal.

V. Ethnological.

36. Two earthenware vessels, height 11", made by the Guanches. Teneriffe. Arthur E. Shipley, M.A., Christ's College.

37. A flat piece of bone sharpened at one end. The Guaniche Cave, Orotava, Teneriffe. Richard Ward, Esq., London.

38. A large triangular charm and chain; worn by Syrian women.

39. A small narrow-necked bottle for mercury with a sharp pointed base. The thick cement-like substance of which it is made is ornamented with a pattern, produced by means of a punch, that strongly resembles Anglo-Saxon work. The Delta, Egypt. The University Librarian. [Nos. 38 and 39.]

40. An ostrich's egg covered with incised figures of animals, houses &c. Tunis. The Baroness von Hügel, Hampstead.

41. A globular basket made of palm leaf by negroes of Bahama for carrying onions, 1887. Arthur E. Shipley, M.A., Christ's College.

42. A tall basket with a cover. Kaffir. The Curator.

43. A stone-headed club. Crow Indians. Bought by the donor from a native in 1887. Donald MacAlister, M.A., M.D., St John's College.

43 A. Eighteen celts, eleven grooved axe-heads, thirteen pounders, and a number of spear and arrow-heads. United States of America. The Rev. S. S. Lewis, M.A., Corpus Christi College.

44. A small square basket, with lid, made of white and brown strips of rattang. Caribs of Dominica, West Indies. James Anthony Froude, Esq.

45. A large celt. Grenada, West Indies. *R. E. Froude, Esq., Admiralty Experimental Works, Haslar.

46. (1) A mass of calcite, diameter 7", beautifully rounded and ground smooth on one side; (2) a small pounder; and (3) three polished celts. Santa Cruz District, Jamaica.

47. Two shell adzes. Barbadoes. J. J. Lister, M.A., Leytonstone, Essex. [Nos. 46 and 47, 7 specimens.]

48. Thirteen shell adzes. Barbadoes. Colonel H. W. Feilden.

49. Seven small figures in terra cotta made by the Aztecs of the 15th century. (Professor Giglioli, Florence.) By exchange.

50. A loom of the Kachiquel Indians. San Antonio. Lake of Atitlan, Guatemala, 1885. Alfred P. Maudslay, Esq., London.

51. A feather head-dress. Guiana. Mrs Strickland, Cambridge.
62. Two stone adzes, length 5-01", and 6-03". Raiatea, Society Islands, Nov. 1880. John Young, Esq., the War Office.
53. A small cylindrical drum, covered with shark's skin, height 20-05". Society Islands. Mr Charles Jamrach, London.
54. A weapon, length 11*05", consisting of a neatly rounded and slightly bent piece of wood. Along the inner curve for about two-thirds of its length it is set with shark's teeth; the remaining portion forms the handle. ? Kings- mill Islands. Professor Middleton.
55. A model of an outrigger canoe, length 9". Gilbert Islands, N. Pacific. II. M. Brady, Esq., F.R.S., Brighton.
56. A model, similar to No. 55, length 44". B. E. Froude, Esq., Admiralty Experimental Works, Haslar.
57. A large adze blade ('Talla') made of tridacna shell, length 10 05". Nalan, Caroline Islands. (Professor Giglioli, Florence.) By exchange.
58. The handle of a jade adze. New Caledonia. Mr S. G. Fenton, London.
59. A fish-spear. New Hebrides. The Curator.
60. A bow and five arrows. Santa Cruz Islands.
61. (1) A spear with a number of fine bone barbs set in rows, richly ornamented with coloured grass plaiting, red and white paint, &c., Bougainville Island; (2) a bow and two arrows, Florida Island; (3) six arrows, ----- Island, Solomon Islands. Mrs Michael Foster. [Nos. 60 and 61, 10 specimens.]
62. (1) A bow (strand wanting) and twenty arrows; (2) twenty small leaf-darts. Dutch Papua. S. J. Hickson, M.A., Downing College.
