FIFTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

ANTIQUARIAN COMMITTEE

TO THE

SENATE,

November 26, 1889.

[From the Cambridge University Reporter, 1889 90.]

Fifth Annual Report of the Antiquarian Committee

MUSEUM OF GENERAL AND LOCAL ARCHAEOLOGY,
Nov. 26, 1889.

The Antiquarian Committee beg leave to present their Fifth Annual Report to the Senate. Since their last Report there has been a satisfactory increase in the number of visitors to the Museum. As might be expected this increase was most marked during the longer days of the spring and summer months; but the attendance during the year may be considered to have averaged ten visitors per day.

In the Easter and Michaelmas terms, at the request of the Chesterton Young Men's Union, the Curator gave two popular evening lectures on the contents of the Museum. On each occasion about fifty of the members of the Union were present.

The gas-lighting, which previously stopped short of the last gallery, has been extended to the workroom, so that now the lighting of the Museum is complete, though more burners may in time have to be added.

Antiquarian Gallery. Through the energy of Professor Browne five most interesting and beautiful carved stones of early date (some originals and some facsimiles in plaster) have been secured for the Museum. These, with the other specimens of Christian Art already in the Museum, will form the nucleus of a special section devoted to Christian Antiquities.

During the Long Vacation the Curator excavated a portion of an extensive Roman refuse-pit and of a burial-place of uncertain date, of which he had found traces last year on the eastern extremity of the island of Alderney. With the efficient help of Dr Frederick P. Nichols, now stationed in Alderney, the pit was systematically explored. The work was carried on for over six weeks, and though the actual finds were in themselves of no special value, the digging gives promise of future good results. The great quantity and variety of the fragments of pottery and rough bricks and tiles already found seem to point to a large and permanent Roman settlement in the island. Besides some pottery of types new to the Museum, glass (like the earthenware very fragmentary), bone pins, bronze finger-rings, and a coin (first brass, A.D. 191) of Commodus were found. Through the kindness of Mr Rowe, who farms the land on which the pit is situated, the Curator hopes to continue the digging next year. The best thanks of the Museum are due to Dr Nichols for his untiring zeal and disinterested help in this work.

In last year's Report it was stated that "the additions to the series of Saxon ornaments and of stone implements have been so numerous during the year that fresh accommodation in the shape of glazed drawers is urgently needed." As no such additions to the fittings of the gallery have been made, and as during the past twelve months these collections have considerably increased, it is obvious that a fresh set of drawers has now become a matter of necessity.

Library. The library also continues to increase, so that the existing book-cases are already full; and also the cupboards in which unbound serials, prints, drawings, &c., are kept.

Ethnological Collections. The entire collection of over 300 specimens formed by the late General Sir Peter H. Scratchley, K.C.B., who was the first to hold the office of H.M. High Commissioner for New Guinea, has been deposited in the Museum, on loan, by the kindness of Lady Scratchley, as was mentioned in a report dated October 25, 1888 (Reporter, p. 122).

The acceptance of this collection made an addition to the existing show-cases necessary, and the wall-case in Gallery H was accordingly extended along the whole north wall. In this case the Curator has found space to exhibit, side by side with the Scratchley collection, all the objects which the Museum already possessed from the same locality. At the same time, the centre of the new portion of the case has been made deep enough to display, without fear of injury, some of the larger objects forming part of the older collections, such as the Solomon Island bowl presented in 1885 by the Rt Rev. J. R. Selwyn, Missionary Bishop of Melanesia, and the canoe, from the same group of islands, presented in 1887 by the Hon. Sir Arthur H. Gordon, G.C.M.G., Governor of Ceylon.

The most noteworthy accession of the year is a series of five hundred and eleven stone and shell implements and ornaments, with valuable fragments of pottery &c. collected in Barbados and other West Indian Islands by the donor, Colonel Henry W. Feilden, whose work in connection with the Nares Arctic Expedition is well known.

The same gentleman has also presented his collection of rare stone implements found in Cape Colony and Natal, and a set of weapons, implements, and ornaments in use among the Kafirs of the present day.

Bishop Selwyn has further increased the collections by seventy selected specimens consisting of dresses, ornaments, utensils, implements, weapons, &c., from the Solomon and Banks Islands and from Santa Cruz. Among these the most interesting object is a sacred image (a piece of chalk fashioned into the semblance of a human head), “a Tidalo, or ghost deity, to whom prayers were made for crops, &c.”

The Curator has placed on deposit a small richly-carved Maori war-canoe, which was brought from New Zealand to England in the year 1801.

The arranging of these collections occupied the Curator during the whole of two terms, so that the catalogues have not made the progress which he had hoped for. His labour was greatly increased by the fact that all the objects which had already been arranged in the older portion of the wall-case had to be taken out and shifted and re-sorted more than once so as to utilise to the utmost the limited space left unoccupied after the New Guinea collections had been properly housed. No room now remains in any of the show-cases for future accessions, and portions of the older collections have had once more to be put aside for want of space.

The Curator has this year presented the oak show-case which since 1887 he has lent to the Museum for the better preservation of the hafted stone implements; but case room is still urgently needed, not only to encourage fresh donations, but also to prevent the exposure of fragile and valuable objects, already in the Museum, to dust, and to the still more pernicious handling of visitors.

Looking back over the five years which have now elapsed since the formal opening of the Museum on May 6, 1884, it is satisfactory to note that all the collections have increased very largely and that the rate of increase is steadily maintained. Up to October 31 last over two thousand eight hundred objects had been added to the Museum, as is shown in the tabular statement appended to this Report, with upwards of nine hundred books and pamphlets. The donations to the Accession Fund set on foot in 1886 have amounted to £301. 12s. 0d.

During the current year the Curator has received the following donations towards the Museum Accession Fund

H.M. Brunel, Esq. (for 1888 and 1889)	10	0	0
